Furukura Keiko, 36 years old, is a single woman who has been working at a convenience store for 18 years. Keiko feels relaxed only when she is working at the convenience store. She works there not because the store has a friendly *environment, but there is a *manual that tells how each convenience store worker should *behave. Keiko only has to study the manual and *obey its most *basic rule: “Be a part of the store.” Keiko is *satisfied with her life because she has learned to obey the rules. However, the people around her are not satisfied with how Keiko lives her life. Her friends think that ①it is bad for her to be a store worker for a long time. They want her to get a full-time job or *get married. They really love her, but never *accept her own *happiness. Keiko suffers from ②the dilemma.

Keiko is a character in the novel, “Konbini Ningen” by Murata Sayaka, who won the Akutagawa Prize, 2016. Now, let’s think about you. I think your parents and teachers often say to you “This is good for you” or “That is bad for you” because they worry about you. Though you may want to be *left alone, their advice will help you. You have to learn how to behave ③before you become strong enough to stand on your two feet. Someday ④you will (have / your own / to / goals / and / set) decide the way of living. And that time will come in the near future. If you don’t have any goals, you can’t “truly” live your own life.

It is said that now is “the time of the *personality.” If so, can you do anything *unlimitedly? No, ⑤it does not mean you can do *whatever you want to. You must remember that any of your choices, comments and actions will *affect not only yourself but the people around you. When you *insist on your freedom, you have to take *responsibility and *respect others’ rights, too.

Following someone else’s advice is easy, but it may injure your freedom. You can’t enjoy your freedom unlimitedly. Learn much more about the social rules from *adults. After that, you can search for the place under the responsibility. Your heart will be at peace there. Live your own life.
